

p1 and p2 are declared as new instance and objects respectively.
So, p1==p2 and p1.equals(p2) are same though, those are not meant that the values are same, but these classes are same. That's why the results are false.